Commercial Insurance Primer for First Nations Organizations: Navigating Risk, Compliance, and Community Protection.

Join us for an exclusive mini workshop designed to equip housing administrators, community leaders, and operations staff with essential insights into commercial insurance planning. This session provides a clear, practical overview of the legal frameworks and administrative best practices that help safeguard First Nations Communities.

Rosie Charles
Director Housing & Technical Services, PAGC

Rosie Charles is a member of the Lac La Ronge Indian Band and resides in Prince Albert, Saskatchewan. She is a founding board member and holds professional designations with the First Nations Housing Professional Association and the Aboriginal Financial Officers Association, where she is recognized as a Certified Housing Professional and a Certified Indigenous Human Resource Professional.

Rosie has more than 31 years of experience in First Nation housing, having worked in a wide range of roles throughout her career. Her professional background includes positions with Tribal Councils, the Canada Mortgage and Housing Corporation (CMHC), and First Nations organizations, as well as 11 years serving her home community, where she began her career.

She brings extensive knowledge and expertise in program and financial administration, project management, property management, consulting, and facilitation, and has shared this expertise through her work across communities throughout Canada.
